

Yoga That Works from Tai Chi Youth

Chinese Yoga™ has fixed sleeping disorders, drug addictions, and anxiety.

TAI CHI YOUTH North Hollywood, CA (SHAOLIN COMMUNICATIONS) May 16, 2016--Tai Chi

Youth will launch its first Chinese Yoga™ program June 4, 2016, in North Hollywood Park, California. This Chinese Yoga™ program was created by Richard Del Connor, “Buddha Zhen,” in 1984 for all of the Shaolin Chi Mantis™ Kung Fu and Tai Chi programs taught since then. This is the first time students can learn and experience the health and well-being of Shaolin Kung Fu without participating in the martial arts training of Shaolin Kung Fu or Yang Tai Chi. Class curriculums were developed by Richard Del Connor in the 1990s when his programs were taught in Utah rehab centers, elementary schools, middle schools, churches, continuing education, Liberty Park and a maximum security prison in Salt Lake City.

Chinese Yoga™ was taught at rehabilitation centers in Salt Lake City, Utah, from 1992 until 1999 when Buddha Zhen returned to California. Most of the inmates, male and female, were convicted of drug usage. During the initial classes of Chinese Yoga™, students are sometimes stretching muscles, ligaments, and blood veins in new positions. Several side-effects of Chinese Yoga™ are beneficial and immediate. As the blood veins are stretched and relaxed, they shed some of their deposits from their inner linings. Most of these deposits which may include cholesterol are unnoticeable as they are absorbed into the blood and filtered out. But some of these deposits may be drug residues. So some of the Chinese Yoga™ students in these rehabilitation centers shared their experiences and information so Buddha Zhen could understand this “stony side-effect.” According to the inmates these “stony experiences” only lasted a couple classes. One student confessed to Buddha Zhen, “I felt guilty getting stoned like that again!”
